Scuba Diving in the Bay Of Islands

On top of being one of NZ's most beautiful underwater landscapes we also have two historically rich shipwreck sites.

The HMNZS Canterbury F421 now rests in Deep Water Cove near Cape Brett. Upright and in tact, she makes for an impressive sight in a great dive location!

The Rainbow Warrior was famous in the 1980's for being sunk by the French government to stop Green Peace protesting the Nuclear detonations at Mururoa Atoll. Re-sunk in 1987 in the it is now a colourful artificial reef covered in life and a must do on many divers lists.

Reef diving is completely different from anywhere were else in the world. We have a blended zone with tropical fish brought down to our temperate environment. These wayward tropical fish are brought south by the East Auckland Current. We get Lord Howe Coral fish, Kermadec Scalyfins, Gold ribbon Grouper, Toadstool Grouper, and Green Wrasse to name a few. As well as all these tropical fish we see some amazing NZ residents. The largest Stingrays in the world, with our Short tail Rays getting up to 3m across and weighting over 300kg, five different types of Moray's, massive Scorpionfish and schooling kingfish!
